

THE CHARMING LITTLE WIDOW.

"You must come with me to-night, Shirley, and I will show you one of the most bewitching widows you ever beheld. I am a widow, and you are, you will find yourself conquered at once. Say, will you come and see my beauty?"

"No, I thank you," replied his friend; "I have something to employ me especially to-night, but if I had not, Ellery, I should be off for I have all I look on as a most designing race, with their type-begone voices and over ready ways for the dear departed. It should lose my senses so far as to marry one of those who at least had the honor of having her first husband living, as I believe that would prevent his virtues being brought up in comparison with his faults."

"Ha, ha," laughed Ellery. "All this tirade against widows drawn forth by my luckless invitation. But you are entirely too, verily, my friend, on the subject. I will bet you something handsome that you will fall in love with a widow yet. But good evening, I must go and make myself killing, for besides the widow there will be lots of pretty girls at Mrs. Empton's tonight, and always for the honor of the buttons look handsome."

This conversation was held at Shirley's room, where he was sitting lazily improving on the guitar, when Ellery gave the invitation. Though not a woman-hater as his friend had stated yet from his retelling habits, he did not seek the society of ladies. When released from official duty, he preferred enjoying himself with books, music and male friends, and thus included some of his brother officers to bestow upon him the cognomen of woman-hater.

"Where is the friend you promised to bring to-night?" asked Mrs. Martin of Ellery. "I must confess I have quite a curiosity to behold Lieutenant Shirley, and I have been telling myself of him ever since he was released from his duty."

"He is exceedingly not being able to redeem my promise," he replied, "but a prior engagement prevented me from doing so. How I do wish you would enter into a little plot of mine against him for a week or so. Say yes, like the child a burglar, before I tell you."

"No, excuse me, Mr. Ellery, I shall do no such thing. Tell me what is your plot?"

"Tell me, too," Mr. Ellery, said, a young lady of about twenty, who approached, and whose merry eye beamed a kindred spirit to his own; "tell me, too, and I will answer for it, that sister Juliette enters heart and soul into your plans, whatever they may be."

"I shall be a thousand fold indebted to you, Miss Jeannette, said Ellery. "Well, how do you plot, or rather the outline of it, if you will accept my aim to lead you to that 'obey son' for I, must confess, I should like some woman wit to perfect my ideas."

"None of your plots and conspiracies for me; I'll have none of them," said Mrs. Martin the widow, as she left them to play her aunt's previous request for music, and where we must leave her, seated at the fine-toned piano, discoursing most excellent music, and holding her audience enthralled, as if by magic. As for Ellery and Jeannette they had no music in their souls, at least for the time, and were, therefore, the better fitted for treachery, stratagems and plots, in which we leave them engaged."

I am sure, reader, had you seen Juliette Martin, you, like Ellery, would have called her a bewitching creature. Her delicate form, large, beautiful eyes of dark hazel, her brown hair, neatly approaching flaxen, needed not the cherry mouth, nor complexion like the sunny side of a peach, to let her down at once as a beauty. Then her manner, too, was so soft, so insinuating, that you could not choose but to love her. She had married, at her father's command, a man whom she highly esteemed; if she did not love him with a young girl's romantic fire, and whose sudden death had left her with an infant daughter, and a competency, alone in the world at the early age of twenty-one. Many offers of marriage had already been refused by her, although she never asserted that she did not intend marrying again.

Jeannette Martin, her husband's young sister, was now on a visit to her; she resided with her aunt, Mrs. Empton, and from her gay, cheerful disposition, had rendered herself a favorite with every one of her social circle.

The plot, disclosed by Ellery was not entirely revealed by Jeannette to her sister-in-law at bed-time; although she obtained from her the somewhat reluctant promise of allowing her to persuade the widow for a few days, the farce beginning the next morning with an excursion planned to the country.

"I do not ask you to let sister Juliette," said the merry girl, "only not to unmask me. I wish to tease that young fellow, somehow or other, for a pretty little speech of his that has come to my ears."

"But I will not lend my aid in the least, if any one will be injured by your frolic," said Mrs. Martin.

MONDAY MORNING, NOV. 21, 1859.

Republican State Committee.

There will be a meeting of the Republican State Committee, on Monday, November 28, at 10 1-2 o'clock, at No. 31 West Chester street, Providence, R. I., for the purpose of considering the question of calling a State Convention to nominate state officers, for the selection of delegates to the Republican National Convention of 1860, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before them.

BYRON DIMAN, Chairman.
R. K. HAZARD, Jr., Secy.

WASHINGTON AND EVERETT.—We have just received from the publishers, Messrs. O. H. Bailey & Co., of 543 Broadway, New York, a pair of very large, full length steel engravings of Washington and Everett. So many coarse, miserable pictures have been palmed upon the public as works of art, and especially in cheap, black, and muddy engravings, that it is difficult to convince persons of taste that they are safe in ordering what they have not first seen. We are happy to be able to say, the engravings are all the publishers claim for them, really beautiful works of art, that will adorn any parlor. No American home should be without a good portrait of Washington, and now, as Mount Vernon is about to be rescued by the ladies, it is especially appropriate that the hero and his home should be placed prominently before the public.

Mr. Everett, from his position, fame, and worth, as well as from his efforts in behalf of Mount Vernon, which have already contributed over $70,000 to the fund, is well worthy of being associated with the memory of Washington. The likenesses are excellent and spirited, and both engravings are offered to be sent to subscribers post-paid, and any three dollar magazine a year for $4.00. Or one engraving and a magazine a year for $3.00. We have never before seen anything so good at anything like the price. We notice that T. W. Wood has been appointed agent for this place, and that he will receive the money and order the engravings.

THE LADIES' EXCHANGE.

Messrs. George W. Warren & Co., have nearly completed their new establishment, and have commenced to run off their entire stock of Fall and Winter goods at greatly reduced prices, to secure a clearing out previous to removal. Their advertisement is worthy the attention of our readers, as a "penny saved is a penny gained," and there the thing can be done without an effort.

We publish, by request, the following extract from the Providence Journal, concerning the case of the girl Lucy:

"A gentleman in New Orleans owned a negro child which he brought here, thus voluntarily making her free. The mother, who remained in New Orleans, fell into bad ways of living, and made repeated attempts to induce the daughter to join her. These were resisted by the friends of the girl; but a few months ago, the mother came to Providence with two other colored people, and partly by persuasion, and partly by force, succeeded in carrying her off. The widow lady, in whose house she was at service, was sick in bed, and could offer no effectual opposition, and her former master, who had freed her, and had always befriended her, was in Cuba. Returned to New Orleans, she became, by the law of Louisiana, the slave of her former master, although he had once relinquished his ownership over her; and he was by the same law made responsible for her conduct. All efforts to induce her to come back were in vain. She preferred the price which her dusky charms could purchase there, to the drudgery of honest service here. As the only way to relieve himself of the legal responsibility which this singular case of a fugitive slave had involved him in, he instructed his agent to sell her to her own mother, and for any price which the mother, knowing that she was the only purchaser, might see fit to give; it not being his expectation that anything but a nominal amount would be paid for her, and not his intention to appropriate even that to his own use."

CIDER MAKING WITHOUT PRESSING.

It is stated that a man at Parkersburg, Va., is successful in making cider by the following process: He grinds the apples, and fills casks with one end open, the bottom having some sticks and straw, like a leech tub for ashes. On the pomace he pours much water, as it would yield juice by pressure, and that displaces the juice and sends it to the bottom, from which, after two days, it is drawn by opening the faucet, and as the cider is heavier than water, it runs off at first pure. The pomace, too, having an affinity for water, absorbs that which displaces the natural juice, and leaves the pomace quite tasteless. This process may be useful to persons who have a few apples and no cider press.

The catalogue of Yale College for the year 1859-60, presents the following results:—Professional students—Theology 27, Law 28, Medicine 46, Philosophy and the Arts 46,udent for name inserted twice. Total, 139. Academic students—Seniors 111, Juniors 101, Sophomores 117, Freshmen 173. Total 502.—Total in all departments, 641.

MISERY AND DEATH.—A few days since, a policeman in New York visited a house in that city, where he found in one corner of an attic room a woman lying dead in a state of nudity. Squatted in another corner of the same room, were six or eight women, nearly naked, and most of them stupefied from the effects of alcoholic drinks. There was no fire in the room, and the air was almost suffocating.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

The Railroad.

The following communication was handed us by one of our oldest and best respected citizens.

"I look with delight at the fair prospect there now seems to be of having a railroad from our city to Fall River, and as we are in a position to connect with the rest of the world. I think it is a reasonable and, considering our isolated condition at certain seasons, that we have done without one so long, and it doubtless will add greatly to our trade and prosperity. While I feel such a prospect with a foreboding pleasure, I recall to mind an agitation on the same subject that was not very long ago. While riding with a friend, who is an ardent opponent of the Worcester Road, I told him that the capitalists and citizens generally were alive to the importance of connecting themselves by rail to the other roads, etc. Well, he admitted its importance, 'but' said he, 'the people in Newport look the practical energy to carry a matter through that requires an outlay of capital, and for public benefit, and a sacrifice of ease. They can look at you have not been seen that will do it. I feel rather as if my family had been disparaged, but am determined to bear no such insinuation. Follow citizens, and his words prove true as of old."

RICHMOND, Nov. 17.—The military here are under arms, and ready to march at a moment's warning. In consequence of reports from Charlottesville of an intended rescue of Brown.

A new "confidence" game, which successfully played off upon one of the fashionable seminaries in New York city last week. A well-dressed man, representing that he had three children, whom he desired to place in some educational institution, and he wished to make some enquiries as to the religious advantages afforded. The principal replied that the pupils were permitted to attend such churches as their parents desired, and that family worship was held at the institution every day. Our applicant was, however, hard to please, he required evidence of the evangelical character of the teachers, and that there were no pupils in attendance to impart to his sons any impure ideas of modesty and religion. A long catalogue of references seemed to satisfy him, and he finally came to an understanding as to the terms, on which his children should enter the institution and board in the family of the principal. The conditions, payment in advance, seemed for a moment to take him by surprise, but recovering himself he exclaimed, "Oh, certainly," drew out a pocket-book and tossing over a few bills, not enough for the occasion, finally produced a draft, seventy-eight dollars in amount, over the bill charged for tuition. The principal obligingly took it, paying the difference, and the patron took his leave. The three new pupils have not come as yet, and no bank will cash the draft.

A FUNERAL INSTEAD OF A WEDDING.

Frank Lewis, one of Philadelphia's most estimable citizens, who was to have been married on Wednesday to a daughter of Commodore Sedgwick, died after an illness of a few days in that city, on Monday last. The invitations had been issued and preparations had all been made for the wedding ceremony, when he was suddenly taken away.

DIED.

In this city, 18th inst., Jane, daughter of Charles and Mary Jane Bowler, aged 14 years and 4 months.
Funeral Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, from her residence, No. 17 John Street. Relatives and friends are invited to attend.

A BROAD CHURCH.

The new church for Henry Ward Beecher is to have places in the pews for six thousand persons, and to cost $125,000! The church now in course of erection for Mr. Spurgeon, in London, has seats for only a little over three thousand, with standing room for two thousand more.
